The firm has counseled clients from India, Switzerland, Germany, China, Panama, Singapore, India, Australia, the United Kingdom and the Middle East—with the added benefit of offering a multilingual staff proficient in Korean, Italian, Chinese and English.

One particular area of domestic expertise for Thorn Law Group is in assisting clients navigate the IRS Amnesty Programs, voluntary disclosure laws that encourage taxpayers to bring their past, previously undisclosed, international tax matters into compliance. “We’re helping many individuals, businesses, trusts, and banks from across the country and around the globe disclose offshore bank accounts and avoid severe civil penalties or criminal prosecution,” explains Thorn. With the additional recent implementation of the Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA) and the government’s increased offshore account enforcement activities, taxpayers’ unreported foreign accounts are at an increased risk of disclosure to the IRS.

“Individuals seeking to limit their exposure to serious penalties and avoid criminal prosecution should discuss their situation with an experienced D.C. tax lawyer,” says Thorn. “Our firm has helped hundreds of individuals and businesses both domestic and abroad come back into tax compliance under the IRS Amnesty Program.”

“Tax litigation is complex and daunting,” Thorn sums up. “We at Thorn Law Group are proud to be regarded as trusted advisors within the legal and professional community.”
